

BABA'S FAMOUS STEAK AND LEMONADE

Prepared 2026-07-17 · Source: City of Chicago public food-inspection records · MagDynamics / ECARMF

What the public record shows

Date	Location	Failed on
2026-07-13	10343 S Halsted St	Person in charge has no Chicago certified food manager
2026-05-11	345 N Central Ave	Bulk containers not labeled in storage (...ON LARAMIE, INC)
2026-05-11	810 W 59th St	Person in charge without proof of food-safety training
2026-04-17	3407 W Madison St	No person in charge with a valid Chicago certificate

Four failures across four locations — the most recent just days ago.

The pattern that matters

Three of four failures are the identical root cause: no certified/trained manager on site. That is a credential-tracking failure — a certificate lapsed, or a new site opened without one, and nothing flagged it. And notice the structure: at least one location is separately incorporated (“...ON LARAMIE, INC”) — you already run as multiple legal entities, exactly the shape our platform is built around. The structure that currently hides risk becomes the thing the platform organizes.

What it costs beyond the citation

- Re-inspection fees, and repeat failures push toward license action.
- Every failure is visible right now to customers, your landlord, and your insurer.
- Inspectors return to repeat sites sooner — the pattern predicts the next visit.

What “ahead of it” looks like

One governed board across every location and legal entity: certificates and training tracked with expiry alarms weeks ahead, a per-site readiness checklist, and an on-premises AI analyst that ranks which location is most exposed this week — your data never leaving your building. Multi-location operators are our exact specialty.

Email opener: “Baba’s came up in public enforcement records: four failed inspections across four locations since April, three for the same missing-certified-manager issue. That’s a tracking gap, not a people problem — and it’s fixable. My team put together a one-page brief on it. Complimentary, yours whatever you decide — want me to send it?”

This brief is complimentary and yours to keep, whatever you decide.

INTERNAL — REMOVE BEFORE SENDING: Draft — verify common ownership; note the multi-entity structure is itself a selling point.